WEDNESDAY MORNING, JANUARY 6, 1858. THINGS TO THINK OF FOR THE FUTURE Let a clear conscience approve every ac-

Do all the good you can and as little harm as possible. Be charitable towards those who may differ from you-as all humanity is liable to err.

it is best to ascertain who is erring before pronouncing judgment. Determine on this, the beginning of the new year, to make good resolves, and, if possible, live up to them. Ponder well the past and draw useful lessons therefrom. Find out the causes which have produced misfortunes, embarrassments, &c., in the year just ended, and avoid them in future. If to accumulate wealth be an object, remember "time is money"--and if to acquire gold-there is no surer way than to save Iffame, honor, virtue, renown, intelligence, be accomplishments and qualities which form the impregnable bulwark of human character, learn that they are all within your reach. They who neglect these are treacherous to their own best interests.

Those prone to dissipate should look at dissipation's practical effects and they will turn from it in disgust. Curb a bad temper, for, like McFingal's gun,

"When aimed at duck or plover, Kicks and knocks its owner over. Never use harsh words towards either friend or foe; for, as the Arabian proverb says, "Curses, like young chickens, come home to roost.' In all things exercise approving judgment and practice sobriety. Water was made for nourisbment—an absolute necessity—ardent spirits for medicine in small doses. It is mistaken policy to drink the Old Year out and feel "rocky" the next day.

Those who wish to avoid being troubled with the presentation of bills on New Year's day, which they cannot adjust, should henceforward live within their means, and not go in debt. "Pay as you go" is an excellent maxim. It gives ease all round.

Recollect that the desire of those in moderate circumstances to fashion after persons blessed with greater affluence, is a besetting sin of false pride, and often ends, not only Walker, McVeigh & Chamberlain, Harper & ping, a full supply of the genuine article, rein forsaken poverty, but in a fall from inordinate ambition to regretful obscurity.
